Malmö, Sweden, 20 March 2026

Position Green, a leading sustainability reporting and management platform, has been recognised in the Financial Times FT1000: Europe's Fastest Growing Companies, the annual ranking compiled by the Financial Times and Statista that highlights the continent's most dynamic and high-growth businesses.

The FT1000 special report, now in its tenth edition, identifies companies across Europe that have achieved the highest compound annual growth in revenue. The ranking is based on independently verified financial data and extensive research conducted by Statista and the Financial Times.

Position Green's ranking as number 123 out of 1000 companies in the FT1000 reflects the company's strong growth and increasing demand for solutions that help organisations manage sustainability data, navigate evolving regulations, and translate sustainability efforts into measurable business value.

"We are proud to be recognised by the Financial Times as one of Europe's fastest-growing companies," says Daniel Gadd, CEO and co-founder of Position Green. "Businesses across Europe are facing a fundamental shift where sustainability is becoming central to competitiveness, risk management and long-term value creation. Our growth reflects the increasing demand for technology and expertise that help companies integrate sustainability into core business strategy."

The FT1000 ranking highlights companies that demonstrate not only rapid growth but also predominantly organic and sustainable expansion, making it one of Europe's most credible benchmarks for entrepreneurial success.
